

SOCIAL CHIT-CHAT.

Young Men Returning From Political Work to Fairer Conquests in Society.

Early Autumn Activities Give Promise of a Winter of Life and Gayety in Town.

The New Hotel the Mecca of Pleasure Seekers—Movements of Society People—Personal.

It is with a sense of relief that the greater part of the community turn from the hub-bubble of election to the more placid atmosphere of social life and enjoyment, for where the animus of elections may enter into our social circles it is speedily forgotten when the campaign is over, and the young man who has played at politics for a few weeks sinks his partisanship with his campaign bets, to be revived only when his party requires his services.

There seems to be every reason to believe that this coming season will be an exceptionally gay one, and besides the regular routine of the assemblies, private theatricals, and amateur operas already promised, I hear rumors of several private entertainments which, with the fashionable weddings already announced, will make the early winter months unusually attractive. It is of course almost impossible to keep track of all the minor social events unless those who are desirous of having mention made of them will confer upon us the favor of sending in a brief report of the affair. My only desire is to make this column interesting to the social world at large, without being too personal or in any way hurting the feelings of that limited circle who have an honest objection to seeing their names in print. Dame Gossip, Madam Rumor and the Chatter family occupy such a well known position in the social world, and are so favorably received everywhere that it is very hard to exclude their presence even from the limited circle of Helena society, and I regret to say that I have often met their immediate family at afternoon teas and receptions, where I found them to be among the first who expressed a horror of having their names mentioned.

The German, or rather, I should say, the dance at the Broadway hotel on Friday night which culminated in a German, was a very successful affair. Messrs. J. Reed, H. H. Davis, George Barbour and W. Velle were, I believe, the projectors of the scheme, and some thirty-five couples responded to the invitations sent out.

The Hotel Broadway is certainly immensely fitted for entertainments of this kind, for it possesses, amid many manifold attractions, three very essential requirements, namely, a good floor, attractive surroundings and an excellent cuisine.

The dance on Friday was so arranged that it combined the pleasure of a mixed dance programme, together with a German, the latter being danced by Messrs. J. Reed, H. H. Davis and Miss Flanagan, with Mr. H. H. Davis and Miss Flanagan leading, assisted by Mr. Tom Reed and Miss Blaine, Mr. W. Velle and Miss Annie Flowerree, and Dr. Barbour and Miss Burke. Five figures were danced and, while they were simple, they were so successfully led that the German passed off without any hitch. The favors, consisting of ribbon with each person's name printed upon them, were very pretty, and the work really artistic, it being hand-painted by several of the ladies participating. Mr. Joseph P. Reed is certainly to be congratulated on the success of the affair, and judging by the favors he received this was evidently a popular verdict. Prof. Gaeger's orchestra was admirable, and a new schottische entitled "The Kentucky Jubilee" met with much favor. The ladies' dresses were remarkably pretty and some quite deserving of mention. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Knight, Mr. and Mrs. Quigg, Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Harrison, Mrs. H. H. Davis, Miss Flanagan, Mrs. Broadwater, Mrs. R. H. Floyd Jones, Mrs. Judge Bach, Mrs. Hunt, Major and Mrs. Burke, Miss Flanagan, Miss Burke, Miss Flowerree, Miss Blaine, Miss Knitz, Miss Raht, Miss Davenport, Miss Rumley, Miss Chumasco, Miss Clarke and Miss Frankie Horst of Butte, Miss Fortune, Miss Witherbee, Miss Fisk, Miss Lehman, Miss Bach, Miss Carpenter, Miss Phillips, Miss Bothwell, and Messrs. J. P. Reed, H. Nicholson, H. B. Kane, R. A. Harlow, Ben King, Harry Palmer, M. A. Meyendorff, J. B. Wells, Walter Kelly, G. Barbour, T. Reed, Geo. H. Hill, W. Velle, H. H. Davis, Geo. Child, Ned Child, T. Sharpe, Ed. Prosser, A. M. Thornburgh, C. G. Griffin, Vincent Fortune, S. A. Witherbee and others.

It is only fair to say that the supper was made one of the features of the evening's entertainment. In place of the usual rush and scramble to get nothing, ample time was given, and the handsomely decorated, with plenty of seats, enabled everyone to satisfy his or her hunger without having feet trodden upon or hot coffee poured down backs. The supper itself was served in course, and the attendance was excellent. This in itself is a new departure, and I sincerely trust it will be followed hereafter.

A very enjoyable affair is promised early next week when Mr. Laubenthaler proposes to take a select party of friends to the Great Falls smelter, on which occasion a special train will be chartered to convey the invited guests to their destination, where dancing, supper and a band of music will undoubtedly make the evening only seem too short to those participating. The party is given, I believe, in honor of Miss Minnie Flanagan, who intends shortly to take her departure for her home in St. Louis.

The Literary club held its first meeting at Mr. Smede's house on Wednesday last. This was not, however, one of the regular monthly meetings which proved so popular last year, when all the members of the society were called upon in turn to read or recite something entirely original, but was given for the ladies who, while devoting their time to the manufacture of useful garments for the poor, are entertained with reading by one or more of the members present, the selections being fixed upon by the president of the club.

A hop will be given on Friday, the 11th inst., at Marysville, by the gentlemen connected with the Montana company, limited, of which Mr. Baxley is the manager, and Messrs. Ashley Robinson and W. Braden among the most energetic spirits. As these gentlemen are all well-known in Helena socially, it is fair to presume that quite a number of the social element here will attend the dance.

A meeting of the trustees of the Encore club was held last night to decide upon the advisability of either taking their new hall or making arrangements to retain the old one, but so far nothing has been decided upon. The dramatic question will be taken up next week and some play will be selected to make a part of the opening programme.

In the midst of all this promised gaiety there comes the sad reminder, in the absence of Mrs. M. Beattie from the Broadway hotel, of the sudden death of her little nephew, George Goodenow, who was a bright, promising little fellow and a great favorite with all who knew him. The mother, Mrs. Goodenow, and Mrs. Beattie and Major Maginnis accompanied the remains of their little nephew to his former home, where he will be buried.

BEE-SWING.

How to Clean Gloves.

The question of gloves is one that awakes a responsive chord in the heart of every woman, and even rich ones find it necessary once in a while to have them cleaned. This is a difficult thing to have done satisfactorily, and when well done by French cleaners costs a good deal. To woman of moderate means this expense is almost as much out of their reach as the purchase of the endless new ones which if one wishes to be neat and dainty always. These will be glad to get Georgia Cayvan's recipe, with which she cleans her own gloves as well as a French cleaner could, and yet saves the cost of the performance by doing it herself. "You see," she says, "one needs so many gloves in my profession. There are not only those I wear on the street, and I sell them quite as quickly that way as other women do, but there is scarcely a part I play that does not call for at least two or three pairs on the stage, and one must have nice long ones to wear there, which you have to pull off carelessly and throw about as if twenty-button French gloves were the merest detail to you, though I confess it nearly breaks my heart when I have to treat a new pair in that high and mighty style, seeing that the cost of them comes out of my salary and that treatment of that sort soils them dreadfully. But I have got hold of this recipe, given to me by a little old French lady, and now I clean them myself over and over again and make one or two pairs last me through one of those long runs of a year or more. I go to a chemist's shop and ask for a quart of deodorized benzine, one dram of sulphuric ether, one dram of chloroform, two drams of alcohol and enough lavender water to make it delicately perfumed and pleasant. The clerk mixes that up for me properly, and when I get it home I pour a cupful of it into the basin and wash the gloves in it. If I have been wearing them a long time and they are very black, I have ready prepared two bowls in both of which is some spirits of wine slightly perfumed with the lavender water. Through these I give them two wrings, but if they are not very much soiled one wring will be sufficient. Then I lay them on a table, and with a piece of soft white flannel I rub them smooth so that all the wrinkles from the washing disappear, and they become partially dry. After which I stretch a cord across the corner of my dressing-room, in the light, but out of the sun and wind, and on this I hang them and let them dry for twenty-four hours. If the gloves are very thin and not of the first quality I dry them on my hands, slipping them on and buttoning them, and then scrubbing them briskly with a dry flannel to quicken the process of drying them. But I don't think that pays; it takes so much time, and, no matter how careful one is, a cheap glove never looks well after it is cleaned. I think, on the whole, it is cheaper to throw them away, or rather never to buy them.

A Pretty Innovation.

At the first of the autumn weddings in New York, result of the summer's opportunities for love-making, a pretty innovation was the dressing of the bridesmaids all in light gray. The bride wore the usual conventional white, except that her gown was all of tulle, including of course, the veil, and all six of her attendants were in the same material, which was varied in that from long tulle, which was a gray that was hardly off pearl color, to the last of the six, whose gown was the color of smoke. These dresses were made with gray silk petticoats, over which were half a dozen ballet skirts of the tulle. The long pointed bodices were of the same covered with surplus folds of the illusion. The long gloves, slippers, stockings and ostrich-feather fans—the bridegroom's gift—were of a shade of gray to match the gown, and the only color that relieved the dim, shadowy gowns were bunches of crimson Jacquemont roses, carried in the gray-gloved hands of these six pretty maids. It was something perfectly new in the way of wedding party devices, but was treated with an admiring and well-deserved approval by many initiators before the season is done. The wedding this winter will mostly be "tailor-made," and cream white, pearl white and oyster-shell-white cloth gowns made by tailors and either embroidered in gold or silver or trimmed with white fur, will be the most popular way of dressing one's bridesmaids. These white tailor-made costumes are very popular for early autumn gowns, and are made of cream white wool, combined with the new surah, plaided in two colors, as, for example, olive and orange, shrimp pink and linden green, or golden brown and Roman red. Two pretty dresses of this sort have just been sent to Newport to a late-livinging cottage. The first has a skirt of the brown and red plaided surah over which are long draperies of cream white ursuline. There is a coat of the white with cool color and revers of golden brown velvet, opening over a draped waistcoat of the plaid. With this is worn a stiff white felt hat, with a many-looped ribbon trimming of the golden-brown. The other is oyster-shell-white cloth, made with a directoire coat over a skirt, that made of the white cloth in front and an accordion plaiting of the olive and orange surah in the back, which shows through the flaps of the coat in the back. The pockets, wide revers and deep cuffs, are of olive velvet, with gold buttons, and the surah and waistcoat of the surah. With this is worn a wide-brimmed olive felt hat, trimmed with golden red.

Preparing for Trade.

Bookkeeper (looking up from his paper)—Mr. Silverman, there are to be four weddings in town next week.

OF SPECIAL IMPORTANCE TO Mineral Claimants in Montana.

HELENA MONT., Sept. 1, 1889.
Certain very recent rulings of the General Land office at Washington upon the requirements as to proof in Mineral Entries made by corporations or individuals, make it extremely probable that the majority of such entries, for which applications for patent are now pending, WILL BE SUSPENDED FOR SUPPLEMENTAL EVIDENCE.
It is certainly a wise precaution to anticipate a patent by a careful re-examination of the proofs furnished, in order that such evidence, if found wanting, may be at once supplied.
For such examination and the preparation of all papers needed in mineral claims many years of recent service in the General Land Office give me special advantage.

Respectfully,
A. H. NELSON,
Land and Mining Attorney.
